PRESIDENT BUSH SIGNS "SUDAN PEACE ACT"

2 million already dead in civil war between Muslim government and Christians and non-Muslims

The Bush Administration invited Christian Coalition of America to be represented at the signing of the bipartisan "Sudan Peace Act" by President George W. Bush yesterday in the Roosevelt Room of the White House. President Bush signed the bill in the presence of Secretary of State Colin Powell, former Senator John Danforth, and a number of Members of Congress from both parties. Also attending, besides Christian Coalition's legislative director, were Sudanese religious leaders, including a former slave, and other grassroots leaders and American religious leaders.

Roberta Combs, President of Christian Coalition of America said, "The radical extremist government of Sudan has for years attempted to impose Muslim Sharia Law upon several million of its citizens who are Christian or non-Muslim. These brave people were faced with a choice of either surrendering their deeply-held religious beliefs or being starved and bombed into submission by the Islamic rulers of North Sudan. Under Sharia law, only Muslim men enjoy equality under the law and rights of political participation. I applaud President Bush for signing this vital piece of legislation."

Included in the "Sudan Peace Act" is a provision which allows the President of the United States to impose sanctions against Sudan if its government is not negotiating peace in good faith. The law also condemns the hundreds of thousands of human rights violations and accuses the government of Sudan of using food as a weapon against the rebels fighting against them. The bill authorizes $300 million over the next 3 years for peace efforts in the region.
